“ I recall my time of study at MBTS where I met Dr. McCarty. He was a compassionate friend and teacher to me and many others. Without his encouragement on a personal level some things learned would not have been grasped for future ministry. So thankful for the time knowing him.

“ I had to check my library this morning and found five books by Doran McCarty on my shelves. He taught me how to do field education at William Jewell College and had a major impact on our program since he was so close at Midwestern Seminary. But in addition he was a model for me as both a scholar, minister and friend. "Well done, good and faithful servant..." Jerry Cain

“ Doran was my mentor and friend. He taught me how to think critically and reflect theologically about real life, day to day. What I learned from him has guided me through some challenging career decisions and helped me develop into who I am today. Yes, we shared many experiences at MWBTS, field education, serving as his interim while he was on a sabbatical, working together in associational and denominational activities. But most of all, he was my mentor and friend.

“Doran was an important part of the formative years of my ministry and my theological education. We had the benefit of his leadership and partnership during the years I served at the former Home Mission Board as we trained supervisors for our field personnel. I counted him as a teacher, mentor, partner in ministry, and a good friend. I was honored to have in my life. I pray God's blessing and comfort on his family and friends.

“I benefit from Dr. McCarty's legacy in theological education by being trained at Golden Gate Seminary in it's Supervised Ministry (TFE) program. What I learned during that year continues to shape my life and ministry and I am thankful for the enduring impact of Dr. McCarty. My prayers are with Leslie and the rest of the family.

“Doran and I arrived the same year at Midwestern Seminary, he as a new faculty member and me as a new student. I never had him in class, but like everyone in the program got to know him well as a D.Min. student. That program was life-changing for me in many ways. I was told several years ago that an ATS official had said that it was the best D.Min. program in the country in those early years when the degree was new. That's thanks to Doran. The month after finishing the degree, I was elected as to the Midwestern Board of Trustees and enlisted by Doran to serve as the field supervisor for a D.Min. student living in the St. Louis area, which eventually became a peer group in the St. Louis area. I've loved being involved in field education, and I thank Doran for the chance. He was always an encourager and a challenger which made you try to continue to grow and learn. I am one of many who owe Doran so much for his contributions to my own life and ministry. I'm grateful.

“ When I first met “Dr. McCarty” (aka Gaye’s dad) at the age of 13, I thought he was the most intimidating person I had ever known. He seemed serious and taciturn. It occurs to me that this facade may have been an intentional tactic for dealing with adolescents. His quiet caused me to blather way too much. It surely cautioned would-be suitors coming to visit his budding young daughters. As I matured, I came to appreciate Doran’s intellectual might and curiosity, and his dry sense of humor. In recent years, I think I may have actually called him by his first name to his face. My favorite memory is the twinkle in his eye. That twinkle shown brightest when he was with or referring to his family.
