“ Amanda ❤️ She was one of my first friends when I moved here- we clicked instantly- we were both from up north and thats what brought us together- she and I were pregnant at the same time but unfortunately she lost her little boy- he was a little angel- he would of been twelve now like my son. She gets to be with him now - and that has brought me comfort knowing that. I know Amanda had so much pain in her heart from that and I was there through it all. We had thousands of conversations. She use to come over ever single day back then. I would go to her house too. Back then you didnt need to make plans with anyone you'd just show up and hang out for hours. One of my favorite memories with Amanda was when she came over and we were smoking cigarettes on my back porch I had tiki torches- well out of no where this fricken 6 foot snake fell down off the tiki torch and her and I jumped up off the chair so high and we were so scared I remember we screamed sooo loud! Another silly memory was she was babysitting someone and I went to her house downtown and the kid she was babysitting ran directly into the glass door and it was pretty funny- We literally laughed for hours (the kid was fine don't worry) also she really loved pepper- her and Anthony's dog. When My son was brand new we were at her house and pepper was so hyper he was running and jumping couch to couch in circles And bam landed straight on my son who was sleeping in his car seat- he didnt even wake up and her and I were like OMG!!! - we use to go to bourbon street the club in jax and boy do we have some crazy memories there- we would go to the country room and dance for hours then go to the rap room and dance there too- we went soo many times. We would go to the street races in Jacksonville- and they were craayyyzeeee! She made me try gator tail at the sea food kitchen- her mom was our server... I remember going to her moms and hanging out with everyone. Samantha is such a nice lady. I would of loved to be at the gathering to see everyone but unfortunately I will be out of town

Rest in peace my sweet friend Amanda ❤️ She will forever have a *spot in my heart and I will always remember her.

Love Always,
"Shelleigh"*
