James Mack Schrib (

January 9, 1943 - November 13, 2012

Mack Schrib, 69, died November 13, 2012 at Flagler Hospital following a brief illness. He was born January 9, 1943 in Denver Colorado and grew up in Laramie, Wyoming. He earned a bachelor's degree from the University of Wyoming in Electrical Engineering and followed a career in electrical engineering for several firms. He was a veteran of the U.S. Navy, having served during the Vietnam War. He was preceded in death by his mother, June Schrib, and two nephews. He is survived by two sons, Joe Schrib, Boulder, CO, Elliot Schrib, New York, NY; the love of his life, Leah Von Leu, Deerfield Beach,; and his sister, Jan McIntire, St. Augustine. Mack had lived with his sister for the last seven years following his retirement and helped care for their mother for the last three years of her life. He had a successful career in his chosen field, raised two wonderful sons, and had many friends who will miss his witticisms, intelligent observations on life, and his generous nature. Memorial services will be held 4:00 PM Saturday November 17, 2012 at St. Johns Family Funeral Home. Mack, you left us too early. Your family and friends mourn the loss of your presence and will miss you forever. St. Johns Family Funeral Home is in charge of arrangements.

“ I remember Mack so well from Laramie high school. He was a special friend, kind and funny, and he meant so much to a scared and bullied outsider that Ive thought of him often through the years. Ill never forget the time I was walking up the stairs at LHS, in tears over something; Mack peeled away from a group of kids, came over to me and said "whats wrong?" I cant describe what that meant, but that small act has stayed with me, and, I think, made me more sensitive to unhappiness outside myself. I think now of that boy of seventeen. I am sad that my google search led me to an obituary, but I am glad that he found the love of his life and family and friends who love and miss him. What a gift to have known him.
