“ Our deepest condolences to John's wife, Cathy, and to John's children, adored grand children, and family.

John had a wide breadth of talents. He was intelligent, gifted artistically, loved his music, had a geeky streak that I adored, and told groaner puns or jokes that he would laugh at and I would groan, but still appreciated and laughed at while groaning!

I have many memories of him: from a smile full of joy, playing a guitar and singing to Cathy at their wedding to, more recently, walking through the dancing lights and colors of the Van Gogh exhibit.

His smile, talking to his grandchild Rory during a call on a tablet or in pictures taken with his grandchildren.

He was a good man, very gracious and those he loved in his life, he loved unreservedly.

Bruce and I know that he will be missed and remembered.
