“ To have a grandma in my life like you, I wouldn't have traded that for anything else in the world. The moments we were together were my best memories with you, from being at home on a non-chaotic day, and also in church worship, after church -sitting beside you for potluck, embracing the trait -beheld me. In your presence- you exuded great humbleness in character, always honest in what you spoke, and meekness in your personality. For now the memories we hold with you -from buying veggie from the food market, to the very moment of placing them in the fryer- will forever be held in our hearts. Seperation from someone we love is something that is not easy to embrace, but with the living hope it will allow us to not heed to the worldly conclusions too easily asserted to. It will be a glorious day when I get to see you again and to see and hear your voice, hug you and shout for joy. Until then. . .
