Skaidrite's life was a testament to strength, love, and joy. At the age of 14, she journeyed to the United States, arriving through Ellis Island on October 31, 1949, with hope for a brighter future. She embraced her new home with resilience and grace, building a life defined by hard work, laughter, and unwavering devotion to her family.

She was preceded in death by her beloved husband, Louis Whitney, with whom she shared a lifetime of memories. Together, they operated the Bithlo Motocross track, creating a community where countless riders became part of their extended family. Skaidrite also worked at Universal Studios, where her radiant smile and warm spirit made her a cherished colleague and friend to many.

A passionate golfer, she often spoke of wanting just one more tee time with her son Robert and grandson Kevin. Her love for the game was only surpassed by her love for her family. In her final six years, Skaidrite was lovingly cared for by her daughter, Shari Torregrosa. The two shared countless adventures, from shopping trips to leisurely lunches, treasuring every moment together.
