“ A beautiful soul that couldn't be seen with eye sight, only seen in the love that you feel in your heart.

Oh to share just a memory would not do justice for such a woman and life my mother lived. Taken from us way to soon at the age of 49. My mother lived a lifetime twice in experiences and love. Now I realize who I got that from lol. To those who have been so lucky to have known her in her younger more adventurous days is a gift in its own. She wasn't perfect she made mistakes as do we all. I don't see anyone sitting in a circle of perfect as for myself I'm the farthest from it with so much I blame myself for, so many regrets on things I've said, done, and not being there as much as I wished I would have. However it's not about me it's about my mom who undeniably is more caring considerate loving and beautiful than I could ever imagine. She was full of wild spirit in her younger years. Always shared wisdom, advice, and experiences that I didn't listen to enough. She was the craziest driver to ride with, only to freak out on us when we would drive normal saying our driving scared her, weird right lol. She wanted to do so much and do so much for everyone didn't matter who or why. You wouldn't ever see a time my mom would let someone go hungry or without a place to rest their head didn't matter. She had such a beautiful soul that famous painter's of all time would had to of been in amazement and disappointment. Because beauty such as her and her soul. Such beauty not even the great Leonardo di Vinci could capture on a canvas. She did more than people including myself would even see. I kept things away to protect her. When all along she was the one protecting me and I didn't even notice it. Everything she sacrificed I know I was just lucky to have her in my life let alone as my mom. Understanding is something I should have done more we all need to. When you think of her close your eyes picture and cherish those moments. Feel that breeze coming over your skin? No wind yeah its the love and spirit of her letting you know her love is many things but gone is not one of them. Talk to your loved ones say what you need to say or want. Leave nothing unsaid or memories uncherished. If you do you will end up similar to myself just wondering the earth searching and hunting for the one thing I can never find because it doesn't exist. That's redemption. I miss my momma so much. I'm stuck reminiscing, momma and granny's smile is all I'm missing. Cherish your loved ones cherish those parents and elders. Because you could wake up and never had the chance to talk to them again to say goodbye. I love you mom signed your son that you raised to be strong enough but also gentle enough the son that became a man to early but only survived because of you and granny. I know I have A1 guardians looking down watching over me. Now to make them proud.
